It has been 3 months and we now have 12 Rejuvenation Tubes operating on the planet. Would you please tell us what management has noticed.

Having multiple of these is creating a sort of interconnected energy although it is still largely located close to the devices; the interconnected energy is establishing a new current all over the planet. It is subtle at first but gaining strength around this very idea of recreating, rejuvenating, repairing, re-manifestation. These energies have already some degree of hold on consciousness but are opposed strongly by a variety of thought forms that say you cannot do that. For whatever reason, be it physical, mental or the way in which those energies have been present spiritually is now being better acknowledged. This is a softening or loosening effect in areas that have nothing to do with anything spiritual or even the aspect of vibration or healing. The idea within consciousness of recreating, rejuvenation, repair---the re-manifestation of various energies. It is all possible. This is taking place in areas of science of remediation of the earth, (process of correcting a fault or deficiency) of the creation of new areas that are actually old Atlantean science, Lemurian philosophy, etc. But, in the way in which this is ultimately to have a deeper effect, there does appear to be a challenge to many of the scientific disciplines where it has been assumed particularly in biology that degradation mechanisms override. That the movement to entropic randomness, the breaking apart of various systems is inevitable. This does appear so when one observes space and sees things from far away but coming in close one actually finds the opposite---higher degrees of organization between plants and animals---higher degree of organization with intelligent species than even takes place on earth. In an understanding of this one needs the eyes to see it, needs the ability to perceive these levels of organization and this is currently not present on earth. This is because a variety of processes have been studied that appear to lead to entropic randomness but the shifting of the consciousness around this is fundamental. It goes far deeper than any one life, than any human understanding, it goes to the very core of nature itself and how these things are understood. It is not easy yet at the current understanding level of humanity's science to explain the effect of greater entropic organization over time but it is the ultimate understanding that comes with true rejuvenation. When there is a true degree of rebuilding this must follow along a pattern. It is generally assumed that the underlying pattern as held within the DNA has been degraded. That the degrading comes over time, and this is correct when the imposition of a pattern on top of a degrading pattern has been introduced. This is what your equipment is addressing. Not just from the level of healing or assistance or bringing new energy in but drawing in a pattern that is already perfect—a pattern that generated the individual in the first place perhaps, or that which the soul is designing. But as that energy comes in and it is impressed with the information about the possibility that this can be received, the manifestation can actually be an improvement over the original. This is the aspect of rejuvenation that is not well understood. It is perceived that you can take it back to its original form but how would one take it beyond that without some degree of mutation, some new randomness, and some area that is going to push things in a direction that has not been previously explored. But in point of fact, the organization itself, the very process by which aspects crystallize, coalesce, interrelate and so on can produce some degree of improvement without it having to manifest at the physical world first. Then as a result of that the new organization, the new pattern, or an improvement on the old one manifests at a physical level. This is the other aspect that can come up into consciousness as Rejuvenation Tubes continue to be activated. How can this creation of that which is so inherently beneficial be within my own application, my own body, my own home, my own way of being, or whatever somehow improved, somehow created at a higher level of organization. The first step in answering this question is to know that it is possible. This is in direct opposition to what would appear from the scientific research because the research is insufficient to take into account entropic properties of inherent organization in the universe, but once this becomes a little further understood and accepted those on the leading edge of this, those who are exposed to your equipment will be those who will be able to make this leap. Yes, this is possible. Yes, I can see the higher, more evolved patterns. Yes, I can welcome these into my own body, into my own life, into my own home, my relationships, etc. etc. That is our comment on this, not an evaluation or judgment but an awareness of possibilities particularly oriented towards the future.
